08-12-2005

Bizezia, a provider of online management tools, launched on Wednesday (7 December) a new intranet service for accountants.

According to the company, the Biztranet system was designed to help practices improve their business efficiencies and aid compliance by enabling companies to manage internal documents and information sources from one easy to access, secure area. It reportedly allows users to access a range of personalised practice resources, many of which can be tailored according to the professional body and network with which the firm is associated.

Biztranet requires no capital outlay, as is paid for by a monthly licence fee, the company claims. No other pricing details were disclosed.
